Learning Style

Learning styles are very thought-provoking. I don't swear by them in any way. I am an auditory learner, and I do believe it affects how I study. I need to talk out loud to think and listen to things to learn. The quiz we had to take told me I was 70% auditory. I don't think that this is the only way I have to learn. I can learn in both of the other styles as well. I don't think that it shows itself in my personal life either. The questions about amusement parks, concerts, or a movie were really hard to answer. I enjoy all those things, and I don't think it explains how I learn. I understand knowing how you think but I personally don't put weight behind it.
